Our City comment & discussion

THROUGH a ruling by Adjutant General Boree, the National Guard units called out by Lieutenant Colonel A. J. Eddy to help fight the Berkeley fire and protect property against looting, will not receive any pay for their services.

Undoubtedly this ruling was not made until the governor had sanctioned it.

We have been in hearty accord with most of the governor's attempts toward economy, but we feel he is going too far when he denies pay to men called out by their recognized commanding officer.

Reading between the lines, it looks very much to us as if the trouble lay on account of Colonel Eddy acting before the adjutant general had issued the proper orders.

IN the general run of things this would be the proper procedure, but in the event of a catastrophe like the Berkeley fire, if Colonel Eddy had done otherwise than act immediately he would have been due for more censure than can be given him now for using proper discretion.

THE future of the National Guard units in the several states depends to a great extent on the attitude of the people towards them and such pettiness as this will not help promote the desired good feeling.

If Colonel Eddy had awaited word from Sacramento, which undoubtedly would have been tardy, the delay might have caused loss of life and considerable more loss of property than occurred.

THE public commends the prompt action and excellent work of Colonel Eddy and the men under his command.

If the governor takes exception to the orders made by an officer under his command, let him take the proper course, but refusing to pay the men what is due them is an injustice. The men could do nothing else as soldiers than obey the order; otherwise they would have been subject to a trial by courts martial. Let's have justice.

SINCE that part of the Breed Law, doing away with the speed trap went into effect we fail to note any increase in automobile accidents.

Although a number of law enforcement officers and some judges have claimed the doing away with the traps is a calamity we have always thought otherwise.

A speed trap serves somewhat as a dare and it is our opinion has done more toward the furtherance of the speed mania than the curbing of it.

WE will admit that the collection of speed fines in the different sections has dwindled considerably. This should not be considered, for the main duty of traffic officers is to abate the speeding of autos and not the heavy collection of fines.

With traffic officers patrolling the highways the spirit and intent of the law will be conserved to the fullest extent possible.

GERMAN FOREIGN RELATIONS NOW CAUSE WORRY

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—Chancellor Stresemann and the members of his cabinet were less concerned today over the Bavarian situation than as to what the immediate future holds in store for the government with respect to the impending new adjustment of its foreign relations.

With Adolf Hitler and his Fascist following subdued for the moment, the Berlin government is satisfied that the Bavarian authorities in collaboration with the commander of the federal troops will be able to control the situation. The government reports indicated that normal conditions prevailed in Munich, Nuremberg, Augsburg and other points in Bavarian territory.

SAYS MEXICO NEEDS SCHOOLS
MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28.—The future of Mexico lies in the establishment of 7000 primary schools throughout the republic according to Enrique Corona of the Department of Public Instruction. He declared that of the 14,000,000 inhabitants of Mexico, 8,000,000 are illiterate and that 4,000,000 of these illiterates cannot even speak Spanish, but cling to ancient Indian dialects.

COUNCIL DENIES A PETITION FOR ZONING CHANGE

Horn and Hall Refuse to Vote on the Question

The Glendale council Thursday night denied the petition of H. S. Burn for the changing of a portion of the industrial district in which the Glendale Creamery company is located, back to residential property. This action was taken on motion of Councilman Davis and seconded by Councilman Kimlin.

Councilmen Horn and Hall refused to vote on the question. The vote on this matter was taken after a wrangle of about an hour in which W. P. MacMullin of the Glendale Creamery company, Mr. Burn, O. M. Newby and Roy Johnston took part.

Mr. Newby stated that the council decided several years ago that no industries should be located north of Doran and east of San Fernando road. Since that time, he said the Glendale Creamery company land, and other property have been declared industrial, the council evidently reversing itself in this matter.

"Is this true," asked Councilman Horn. "Was the Glendale Creamery company's property changed to industrial from residential since the section north of Doran and east of San Fernando was declared residential?"

Mr. MacMullin and several others gave answers that did not suit Mr. Horn and he said:

"All of the answers are evading my question. You are beating around the bush. Will you kindly tell me (speaking to City Clerk Van Wagoner) whether or not the Glendale Creamery company's property was changed to industrial after that entire section has been declared residential?"

"It was," replied City Clerk Van Wagoner.

"That is all," replied Councilman Hall.

During the discussion Councilman Horn said:

"I refuse to vote on this matter because I do not know the circumstances. I question the wisdom of permitting the creamery to expand beyond its present proportions at its present location. There is a good class of homes being constructed there and additional improvements to the creamery would injure those dwellings, notwithstanding the fact that the owners of those properties knew that the creamery was there when they bought those lots."

EUNICE, 7, daughter of Mrs. Anderson, was slightly cut.

Carl came to the police station at 6 o'clock this morning and after conversing with the officers for ten minutes, abruptly declared he had committed a murder.

"I told her that the noise must stop," he explained. "She paid no attention and so I killed her." Carl said the murder was committed about 4 o'clock.

The injured children told the police that they were sleeping when they were awakened by the attack of Carl upon their mother. They got out of bed and the boy tried to protect his mother from the blows of the hammer and butcher knife in the hands of Carl. The slayer promptly turned upon the two children. When police arrived at the house the little girl was bathing the wound of her brother and the body of Mrs. Anderson was lying in the kitchen.

AGED MAN KILLS LANDLADY, THEN INFORMS POLICE

Wounds Woman's Son, Baby Daughter Also, Latter Fatally

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 28.—John Carl, 74, early this morning killed his landlady, Mrs. Eunice Anderson, 35, with a hammer and a butcher knife, after an argument regarding noise in the rooming house. The aged man also struck Arthur Anderson, 9, son of the dead woman, three times over the head with a milk bottle, and he is in a hospital, dangerously injured.

Eunice, 7, daughter of Mrs. Anderson, was slightly cut.

Carl came to the police station at 6 o'clock this morning and after conversing with the officers for ten minutes, abruptly declared he had committed a murder.

"I told her that the noise must stop," he explained. "She paid no attention and so I killed her." Carl said the murder was committed about 4 o'clock.

BROWN BETTY CO. TO ASK THAT DUMP BE ABOLISHED

Mr. Kellogg of the Brown Betty Breakfast Food company has requested a hearing before the directorate of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce at its regular meeting next Tuesday evening. Machinery is now being installed in the factory of this industry which promises to become an important business asset of the city. Its cartons in which the food will be sent out to the trade have already arrived bearing the label: "California Quality Foods Co., Glendale, Cal." One of the favors Mr. Kellogg will ask is that the Chamber back him up in his request for the abolition of the dump for rubbish and tin cans near his plant on San Fernando road.

WYOMING TRAIN WRECK HURLS MANY TO INSTANT DEATH IN RAGING WATERS

C. B. & Q. Train of Six Cars, Plunges Through Trestle Weakened by Torrent Rushing Down Channel of Coal Creek, a Usually Trifling Stream

KNOWN DEATH LIST IS TWENTY-SEVEN Passengers Trapped in Pullmans and Day Coaches Are Drowned Like Rats in a Trap; Five Train- men Thought Among the Dead

CASPER, Wyo., Sept. 28.—It was stated by railroad officials at the scene of the wreck of a Burlington through train at Coal Creek at noon today that it would be impossible to remove the coaches from the creek to recover bodies until the waters receded. Reports that one coach had been raised were denied.

One railroad official at noon today placed his estimate of the dead at 25.

Vice President Bracken said his advice showed that the train consisted of locomotive, baggage car, mail car, smoker, chair car and three Pullmans and that there were 27 passengers in the smoker and chair cars which were lot in the swollen stream. The front part of the train plunged into the water, leaving the forward Pullman with its front end tipped down into the creek, the other two Pullmans remaining upright.

Besides the 28 Pullman passengers accounted for, railroad officials said they believed at least two others may have been saved and taken to ranch houses.

A motor car containing trackmen had passed over the bridge where the accident occurred, ahead of the train, but it then did not show signs of being affected. But because of the hard rains, Mr. Bracken said, the passenger engineer was ordered to reduce speed.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 28.—By 2 o'clock this afternoon five bodies had been recovered from the wrecked cars of Burlington train No. 30, wrecked at Casper, Wyo., last night.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Twenty-nine passengers and trainmen on Burlington train No. 30 were missing today, according to latest advice received by the general offices of the railroad here.

There were 32 Pullman passengers, of whom 29 have been accounted for and who are uninjured and 27 smoker and day coach passengers, of whom seven were saved, according to railroad officials. The missing trainmen are the engineer, fireman, conductor, a brakeman, mail clerk and Pullman porter.

WELCOME LITTLE STRANGER, SAYS CITY HALL FORCE

A cute little stranger has arrived at the home of City Engineer Ben F. Dupuy, 722 East Lomita.

And it's the dearest little thing! All the folks around city hall are literally showering the transgressor with congratulations, which Ben acknowledges with the most delicious blushes imaginable.

Judging from general appearances, one would say that the newcomer is between seven and ten days old—it's rather hard to judge correctly concerning things of this character.

Ever since its arrival Ben has been training it in the ways it should go, but he says that the little thing is obstinate and will not behave as directed.

It happened this way: You see, Ben and the family went on a vacation away up in the High Sierra country, above Lake Tahoe. The outfit arrived home last night. While away Ben wanted to produce a surprise for the folks at home, so he shaved everything but his upper lip. The result is the cutest little bunch of red alfalfa you ever saw. He's trying to bring the new arrival up in true French fashion.

KIWANIS ARE BOY SCOUTS IN HOSTS TO THE LADIES

Endorse Sewer Bonds and Hear Bishop Stevens Talk Optimism

At a hilarious meeting intended to demonstrate the good times they always have which make it hard for members to stay away, the Kiwanis club entertained their wives and sweethearts Friday noon at the Tuesday Afternoon club, covers being laid for 125.

President A. L. Ferguson assured the special guests it was in all respects a regular meeting except that it was a much better looking crowd than usual, and this, its first ladies' day, was but a promise of more to come.

Every lady present received "the silent boost," a gift in this instance from the J. A. Newton Electric company, "Aunt Lucy's clothes line" for use on wash day.

The attendance prize of the day also went to the ladies, and so great was the competition to be the donor that the prize was multiplied to six and bestowed upon Mrs. McAttee, Mrs. Philip, Mrs. Jesse Smith, Mrs. Baird, Mrs. Dr. Conklin, and Mrs. Stuart.

Bill Bodie was the most active man on the job because it was his duty to collect the fines and there were plenty of them, the treasurer debiting cash with $6.25 and the assessments ranging from two bits to a dollar for appearing without wives, or for appearing with the wife of somebody else. Dr. Stuart was fined for having his name in the hat twice and every man tagged had to pay up.

Herman Neilsen told of his responsibilities as chaplain of Mayor Robinson on the trip to Mexico and the mayor responded to call for the latest news about the sewer contract, stating it was signed by the Los Angeles council officials this morning at 11:45. The club then went on record for the bonds in a unanimous vote.

There was a lot of good community singing, for which Herb Henning played spirited piano accompaniments, and two beautiful vocal numbers were sung by Mrs. Helen Graham Cole, for whom Mrs. Bagdon served as accompanist.

From start to finish the wives were welcomed, complimented and pollied. Bert Perry, who had charge of the program, taking his crack with the reply of the man who, when he was told that the majority of women have a vocabulary of only 800 words, exclaimed, "But just think of the turn-over!"

The special speaker of the day, Bishop W. E. Stevens of Los Angeles, who is a Kiwanis member, spoke on "True and False Optimism" saying many good things applicable to the special philosophy of Kiwanis principles.

Members of the legislature who attempted unsuccessfully to assemble on Wednesday departed for their homes today and will await call from their leaders.

The governor extended the enforcement of drastic martial law to Murray county on appeal from residents of Sulphur, a village of that county.

OCEAN BOTTOM IS RAISED BY QUAKES

[By Associated Press]
LONDON, Sept. 28.—Discovery by a cable repair ship that the bed of the ocean in the vicinity of St. Helena had risen two miles during the last 20 years has led to a belief among scientists that the whole southern Atlantic ocean bed is undergoing a vast submarine convulsion.

Some authorities have even made the statement that such changes are going on continually, and that these disturbances may occur in any locality. They believe that this is the reason for the frequent sudden appearance of islands and shoals in the southern oceans. It is also claimed that when the ocean bed is raised in one place there is a corresponding drop in some other section of the world.

The discovery of this strange phenomena was made recently when it was reported by the Eastern Cable company that their cable between St. Helena and Capetown was broken at a spot some 800 miles north of the Cape. The cable had been laid in 1899 and had been in constant use.

On its arrival at the designated spot the cable repair ship reported to London that, instead of the depth of the water being 2700 fathoms, or just over three statute miles, as stated on the chart, it was only a little more than three-quarters of a mile deep.

Just Off the Wire From Here and There

CASPER, Wyo., Sept. 28 (United Press).—Floods have again swept Wyoming.

Twenty-five miles of railway track washed out by torrential rains early in the summer and later replaced at an expense of hundreds of thousands of dollars, have again been undermined.

Telephone lines are out in all directions, only one line being intact from Casper to Denver. Weeks will be required to repair damage done and restore rail and wire communication to normal.

Bonerville and Lyscite, centers of the early summer storms, were again hardest hit. In the former locality ten miles of track were carried out and in the latter fifteen miles, dispatchers reported today. Numerous heavy cloudbursts, following a steady rain near the sources of many streams, precipitated the floods. There was little precipitation where the damage actually occurred.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (United Press).—The National, American and Warner companies today advanced the wholesale price of refined sugar 35 points to 9.50 cents a pound.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28 (United Press).—Telegrams pledging support and active work in behalf of President Coolidge for the 1924 Republican presidential nomination were forwarded today to the president by what is believed to be California's first "Coolidge-for-president club."

The club was formed at a meeting held in the room at the Palace hotel here where President Harding died.

PELHAM MANOR, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Gene Sarazen, Briar Cliff Manor, defeated Robert Cruickshank, Westfield, N. J., 7 and 5, in the second semi-final match of the Professional Golf championship today.

COWES, England, Sept. 28.—The United States navy won first and second places in the international seaplane race for the Schneider cup here today.

Lieutenant David Rittenhouse was first and Lieutenant Rutledge Irvine second. The sole British entrant, Captain Baird, finished third. The winner's time over the course of 200 nautical miles was 1 hour and 12 minutes, 26.4 seconds. His fastest speed was 177.38 miles an hour, 39 miles an hour faster than the previous record.

NO LIQUOR ON ANY WARSHIP, ALL OVER

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 28.—That he had "never seen any liquor aboard an American warship" since prohibition went into effect and that he was certain there was none aboard any vessel or destroyer squadron even when it rode into the rocks off Honda, Calif., September 8, was the testimony of Commander William S. Pye, division chief of the squadron, when he was recalled to the stand at the opening of today's session of the naval court of inquiry investigating the disaster.

Other officers of the squadron preceding Commander Pye on the stand have also denied the presence of liquor aboard ships of the squadron, in contradiction of what counsel for one defendant has called "the customary charges of some critics" that liquor must have been partly responsible for the wreck.

Committee of Five on Community Chest Meets

The committee of five appointed to outline a plan of organization on a permanent basis for the Community Chest, of which W. E. Hewitt is chairman, met in executive session this morning at the Chamber of Commerce and adopted a program which will be submitted to the preliminary organization committee, of which Mr. Hewitt is also chairman, at a meeting called for next Thursday evening at the chamber.

An event of big social interest to new members of the faculty of Glendale high is taking place at Brookside park at 4:30, where they are to be guests of honor at a picnic given by the Teachers' club of G. This committee will have charge of picnic arrangements.

GLENDALE MAN HEADS COAST S. D. A. DELEGATES

Six local conferences, the union conference, three sanitariums, a publishing house, and a mission station will send representatives from the Pacific coast to the World's General Conference convention of Seventh-day Adventists, which will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., October 8 to 18. The delegation will be headed by Rev. J. L. McElhane of Glendale, president of the Pacific Union conference.

There will also be representatives from the denominational sanitariums located at National City, Glendale, St. Helena and the hospital in Los Angeles. The publishing house at Mountain View will also send delegates, and the Pacific coast will be prominently represented. The conference presidents will also attend a presidents' convention in the same city, which will begin on October 5.

The General Conference convention will be to the Adventists what a conclave of the board of bishops is to the Methodist or Episcopal denomination. Plans will be made for the advancement of the church in foreign countries; appropriations amounting to several million dollars will be made and the work in the publishing, educational, medical home missionary, Sabbath-school, religious liberty and young people's departments will be strengthened.

Practically every leader from the administrative offices in Washington, D. C., will be present together with every union conference president and every local conference president in North America. Every state in this country and every province in Canada will be represented, also Mexico, Central America, South America and Europe. It is the most important annual convention held by the denomination, as every part of the world-wide missionary program of the church is considered.

Rev. W. A. Spicer, president of the General Conference, is now on his way back from Europe, to be chairman of the convention.

NOTCHERS' CLUB LEADERS PLAN Y. M. C. A. WORK

Leaders of Pioneer Notchers' Y. M. C. A. clubs were dinner guests on Thursday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Kelley at 415 East Lorraine street, covers being laid for J. F. Gasser, Lorin Schlotzhauser, F. O. Taylor, Mr. McMasters of the Glendale Avenue school, Howard Retteberg, Harry Marple, Thomas Ehrhart, E. B. Thomas of Burbank and Rev. T. E. Stevenson of the same city.

It was the first regular monthly meeting of the year and the theme of discussion was the best way to start their respective groups and how to form pioneer clubs—a new feature in Y. M. C. A. work in Glendale. It was in the experimental stage last year, but this year all the leaders will adopt it. Its purpose will be the four-fold development of the boy—spiritually, mentally, physically and in service, with tests to determine progress.

Under the physical side of the program the tests for swimming will be in the Pasadena Y. M. C. A. pool.

For mental development the boys will be taken on educational trips and instruction will be given in woodcraft and pioneer life generally. These will be followed by tests to determine how much has been absorbed.

On the spiritual side of the effort will be to ascertain how much the boy participates in the work of his church and Sunday school. Under service, the boy will be encouraged to show consideration for his parents and the members of his family by work at home.

The next meeting of these leaders will be held at the Pacific Palisades, October 27-28, when all the leaders of Southern California will have a roundup. There will be a camp fire and many pleasant social features and a big "Covered Wagon" stunt will be put on.

Events of Interest to Glendale and Its People

Mrs. Ellis, secretary and chief clerk for Postmaster D. Ripley Jackson, says that letters received from him indicate he is having a wonderfully good time in the east and that he will be home the last of October.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dick of 309 North Louise street celebrated their 44th wedding anniversary early this week by being dinner guests of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Penland, 417 B Riverdale Drive.

The Young People's Society of the Zion Lutheran church of which Rev. H. Kringel is pastor, will give an outing next Thursday evening at Oakmont. Refreshments will be served in the form of sandwiches, cake and coffee. About 22 young people will attend.

G. A. Riehl of Imperial Beach, is here this week visiting at the home of his son, Herman Riehl, and family, at 817 N. Louise street. Mr. Riehl is on his way back to Hotchkiss, Colo., to look after his ranch interests there, but expects to return to California by spring anyway.

SAMUEL A. LEWIS NOW WITH BRAND DEPT. STORE

Samuel A. Lewis is now associated with the Brand Department store—with a largely increased stock of dry goods. In the short time he has been here he has become a great Glendale booster and a strong believer in a big future for the fast growing North Brand Boulevard.

Samuel A. Lewis has had 23 years' retail store experience, having served in an executive capacity as buyer, manager, and merchandise manager in the large metropolitan stores of the east. His connections have been with the Cutler company, Providence, R. I., the R. H. White company, Boston, Mass., the Palms Royal, Washington, D. C.; Bloomingdale Brothers, New York City, and Hamburgers, Los Angeles. Mr. Lewis comes to Glendale from Levy Brothers of Stockton, Calif., the largest store in that city, where he was merchandise manager.

Having greater faith in southern than in northern California, Mr. Lewis spent two weeks visiting the Southland and picked Glendale as the most active and fastest growing city of all, and decided that this was the place.

With his many years of large retail store buying experience, and his connections in the New York markets, he will give the women of Glendale and vicinity seasonal and wanted merchandise at prices the lowest in Glendale. He is now negotiating with a large New York residing buying organization and contemplates periodical trips to the Eastern markets.

Mr. Lewis was quick to observe the need for a fast-growing community like Glendale, and will strive to make the Brand Department store an institution worthy of its name, and will be aggressive and progress with the growth of our fair city. A hearty welcome to you, Mr. Lewis.

Two former pastors of the Pacific Avenue M. E. church will visit Glendale on Sunday. Dr. E. A. Palmer will preach at the morning service, and Dr. H. J. Hartsell in the evening.

Mrs. Richard Sanderoff of Pasadena was a guest at the card party given at the Tuesday Afternoon club house on Tuesday of the present week and was entertained for the night by Mrs. F. S. Card.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Phillips of 207 West Chestnut street were guests Thursday evening at a dinner given by the Los Angeles Wholesale Dealers' Credit association. It was given at the Elitte and covers were laid for 420. Mr. Phillips is credit manager of the Sierra Paper company.

CLUB ACTIVITIES OUTLINED BY EXECUTIVES

Big Program Planned for Tuesday Afternoon Club Opening, October 2

By EVA DANIELS

The executive board of the Tuesday Afternoon club met in the palm room of the clubhouse on Thursday, September 26, at 9:30 a. m., with its president, Mrs. Daniel Campbell in the chair. Reports of standing committees were given. Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, chairman of ways and means, was tendered a vote of thanks for her untiring efforts in helping to secure funds during the past year.

Among the affairs scheduled for the coming two months are the rummage sale, which is to be held on the 17th and 18th of October; the American Legion dinner on October 26; the football dinner, dance and radio party on October 30, and the society circus on November 16 and 17 in the clubhouse and grounds. At this time a Ford touring car will be presented to the person holding the coupon of admission corresponding with the number drawn from the ticket box. Admission price will be ten cents and it is hoped that every resident of Glendale will be on the grounds at some time during the evening to enjoy the fun and aid the club in its endeavors. Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Brand have offered their spacious grounds for a social function in the near future.

Mrs. C. W. Houston, second vice president, and Mrs. Frank Ayars, corresponding secretary, were given a rising vote of thanks for the strenuous work in the revision of the year book.

Five hundred chairs have been purchased by members for the auditorium and the name plates of the donors will be affixed this week. The Community Chest was endorsed by the committee.

In order that the club be run on an efficient business basis a budget system will be carried out. Mrs. Campbell urged that club members extend the hand of fellowship in greeting so that all members may feel the pervading spirit of a happy, united family.

Ten applications for membership were read. Luncheons will be held on the first and third meeting days at 2:30, as there will be only three hundred reservations. Tickets priced at sixty cents each must be purchased before the Friday preceding, from Mrs. Barton, hostess, who will be at the clubhouse, where all business connected with the club will be transacted from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. In compliment to the press of Glendale and Los Angeles, there will be a special "press table" at all luncheons for club editors, at which Miss Eva Daniels, chairman of press, will preside.

The meeting was adjourned at 12:30 and luncheon was served by the domestic science department, of which Mrs. Allan Fairchild is chairman. Prof. Carey demonstrating a luncheon cooked in a steam cooker, which was much appreciated.

At 1:30 a conference was held at which the executive board, curators and chairmen of committees met, with Mrs. Campbell presiding, and a general discussion of plans took place.

It was announced that the music section, of which Mrs. Warren Roberts is curator, would hold its opening program, at which all members are welcome, on Friday, October 12, at 2:30 p. m., in the auditorium. The artists who will appear, through the courtesy of Frances Goldwater, are Sol Cohen, violinist, and Margaret Messer Morris, soprano.

In closing the conference, Mrs. Campbell stated that she would give her best in service to the Tuesday Afternoon club of Glendale, and expected the same from her committees. The club will open its doors on Tuesday, October 2, for the season of 1923-24.

BEREAN CLASS IS ENTERTAINED BY MRS. S. A. CHASE

Mrs. S. A. Chase of 1439 East Wilson avenue entertained about 30 members of the Berean Class of the First Baptist church at her home Thursday afternoon. The guests brought contributions to the box which is to be packed and sent later to a missionary in China. An excellent talk on missionary work was made by the class president, Miss Sicily, and Mrs. C. W. Kent, who toured the east this summer, gave an interesting account of the places she had visited. Little Margaret Chase contributed to the entertainment with two recitations.

A great success socially and financially were the card parties given by Mrs. Frank Salmacia Wednesday afternoon and evening at her home, 361 West California street. MISSIONARY FOLK HEAR PASADENA LADY SPEAKERS

Miss Perkins and Mrs. C. C. Knox of the Congregational church in Pasadena, of which Dr. Fox is pastor, were speakers at the meeting of the missionary society of the First Congregational church of this city, Thursday afternoon. Their theme was the "School of Missions" which their church conducts annually for six weeks. This is about to be inaugurated in the Glendale Congregational church, to start Sunday night, October 30, and continue for six consecutive Sunday evenings. Light refreshments will be served at 5:45 followed by classes which will open at 6:15 to study the Americanization of the child. These will close at 7:45 that an adjournment may be made for the evening service. Everybody will be urged to enroll in these classes.

Mrs. G. H. Schulte, president of the society, conducted the meeting, made an interesting report of the jubilee conference held in San Francisco a week ago. Financial reports were given and the session was followed by the serving of refreshments by Mrs. H. W. Yarek and assisting committee during a social hour.

ODD FELLOWS SHOWING GREAT INTEREST OF LATE

Interest in the local Odd Fellows lodge is evidenced by the constantly increasing attendance on its meetings. The Thursday night session was especially large. On this account the lodge voted to move its quarters from the dining room to the regular club room provided and this was done at the close of the session after practice in lodge work.

The Rebekahs asked and received permission to have the curtains washed and the hall decorated in preparation for the Oriental Dance to be given Saturday night. Three visitors were present, one from Massachusetts, one from New York and one from Northern California.

GOOD MORNING, HAVE YOU SHOT YOUR DEER YET?

Is the "fastest growing city in America" harking back to primitive days when deer, bear and other wild game were shot in the pioneer's very door yard? It would seem so when a four-point buck weighing more than 100 pounds is shot in the Verdugo Hills just outside the city limits to the north, as reported by John and George Meyer, and two other deer are seen in the same vicinity. Also J. R. Thorpe bagged a three-pointer before breakfast one day recently he reports.

GLENDAL SHRINERS ROYALLY WELCOMED

Officers of Glendale's White Shrine of Jerusalem were much impressed by the welcome given their shrine at Pasadena Tuesday evening. Centering the banquet table was a large cross of white centered with greenery in the midst of which stood a little house with a flower garden setting intended to represent Glendale. This was labelled, "Though we will admit that Glendale is the fastest growing city in the world, Pasadena is the fastest builder." It was intended to suggest that Pasadena was able to build a Glendale house in a single night. The program included songs by Mrs. Nina Wenzel, and readings by Mrs. Pearce who is the high priestess of the Glendale Shrine.

R. T. W. CLASS MEETS WITH MRS. MAXWELL

The R. T. W. class of the First Baptist church held its regular meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. D. Maxwell of 126 West Burchett, with about 35 members in attendance. GUILD LADIES MEET TO SEW

Members of St. Mark's Guild to the number of 18 met Thursday at the home of Mrs. M. Kemp, 204 1/2 E. Chestnut street for sewing and work upon quilts. Announcement was made of the cooked food sale to be held at the store of Coker & Taylor on South Brand Saturday at 10 o'clock, and also announcement that the next meeting will be held with Mrs. Kemp, the rebuilding of the church making it impossible to meet in the Guild Hall.

MRS. PIQUETTE HONOR GUEST OF SHRINERS

Mrs. Verna Piquette was guest of honor at a luncheon and shower given at the home of Mrs. Evelyn Pearce on East Maple street Wednesday by sixteen officers of Omar White Shrine of Jerusalem. The smartly appointed table was centered with pink and white dahlias and the luncheon was followed by a social afternoon devoted to needlework, with a few musical numbers.

NOVEL SHOWER WEDNESDAY FOR ENGAGED COUPLE

Charles Cannon and Miss Irene Whitaker Are Honored

Miss Irene Whitaker and her fiancé, Charles Cannon of San Fernando, were the special guests at a miscellaneous shower given for them by officers of Glen Eyrie Chapter, O. E. S., at the home of Mrs. B. O. Holbrook, 426 West Harvard, who was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Dewar and Miss Ann Clark. Twenty-three were present.

A charming setting for the affair was provided in the lavish decoration of the Holbrook home with dahlias. It was decidedly informal, one of the chief divisions of the evening being the preparation of a book of remembrance for the honorees, each guest being given a page on which to write events in the life of the bride such as her graduation, the beaux she discarded, etc. Mrs. James Wyvell won first prize with an illustrated original poem describing the proposal as follows:

"Darling, my darling, wilt thou be Thou shalt not wash the dishes nor yet feed the swine,
But sit on a cushion and sew a fine
seam,
While I bring home the potatoes,
the bacon, the beans.

The cover of the book, which was hand tinted, and decorated with a white star, was designed by Matthew Dewar.

Supper was served at a big table in the dining room centered with a Chinese pagoda from which extended white ribbons with a pasted star at the end of each to serve as a place card. At this time the gifts were presented in a clothes basket. They included many novelties wrapped in original ways and accompanied by messages and verses.

The pink and white color scheme which featured the table decorations was repeated in the ice cream centered with a white heart. Each guest made a toast to bride and groom elect and at the close of the supper the ribbons were pulled from the pagoda and at the end of each was found a "fortune" which was read.

The wedding has been set for some time in November. The only thing to mar the pleasure of the evening was the news which had been received that day that Jacob Whitaker, father of the bride to be, who is now in the east on a business trip, had been taken sick in Milwaukee and is under the care of a trained nurse. It may be necessary for Mrs. Whitaker to go to him.

LYNCH LAW MASKED

There is no excuse in any part of this country for invisible government, for mob rule, for lynch law, whether or not its proponents be masked. A secret organization, construing the statutes to suit itself, making its own code, prescribing and inflicting penalties, is nothing but the expression of the mob. It is lynch law invested with grotesque trappings meant to signify dignity. It is far worse than the impromptu rabble doing a violence under the spur of specific outrage, for it is deliberate, and is not sporadic, but an ingrained quality.

This country, most happily is provided with a constitution broad enough to be competent for any emergency. To obey it is to be peaceable and secure. So far as the court may wander from it, and communities ignore its principles, they promote disorder and encourage anarchy. Therefore the exhibitions of wanton outlawry should be discouraged, and the fomenters of it penalized into recognition of the decencies of life.

A short time ago the fact came to light that Los Angeles was controlled, not by the individuals elected and empowered to control it, but by an invisible group. Reaching from the shadows, the hands of unseen men pulled the wires. The discovery was not pleasing, and considerable ado was made about it. Possibly exposure brought about a sort of reform. That was a local affair, however. As a spectacle it was far from unique, and as a symptom, it was quite familiar to all students of civics.

Down in Oklahoma there is a more poignant question: Shall the commonwealth be ruled by the people or by sinister hidden forces? This is an important question, and the whole country is interested in the answer.

ANOTHER TYPE OF HERO

Captain Watson of the navy expresses the desire to accept full responsibility for the recent wreck of destroyers. What the acceptance of his view on the part of the court would involve, the layman does not know. In all probability it would be the end of a naval career already long, and marked by fine service. In his wish to sacrifice himself, lifting blame from the shoulders of younger officers, Captain Watson displays a quality not short of heroism. As the craft were dashed on the rocks, officers and men alike displayed such courage as made the country proud of them. In the presence of great danger courage is evoked, and is almost a process of instinct.

The heroism of Captain Watson is of a different type. It manifests itself after deliberation; after the weighing of consequences. One may suppose that an officer to whom the honor of the navy is dear; who has devoted to it his best years and complete energies, would prefer to have the final chapter of his life story told with his ship sinking beneath him, than to have in any way brought reproach upon the naval personnel. He is as Arnold Weinkler, gathering ten spears to his own breast.

Before the hearing opened the public was asked to withhold judgment. The request was wholly reasonable, since the circumstances were not understood by the landsman, and he could have no knowledge of what ought to have been done in an emergency such as arose that dire night offshore. Yet the landsman appreciates manhood and valor whether it pertains to his own domain or to the treacherous deeps.

ANY CITY STREET

Over in Los Angeles the residents have found necessity for widening several thoroughfares. Just now this improvement for Tenth street is especially under consideration. The work will have to be done sooner or later, and the later, the greater the cost. The lesson that is being impressed on the people of Los Angeles may be beneficial to other places. In any growing city should be recognized the fact that any street too narrow now for traffic must in the future lead to a congestion not to be endured. High and costly structures erected before the change will have to be razed. This has been proved by the experience of all metropolitan centers. In instances the alterations have cost millions of dollars, every dollar of which might have been saved by foresight. Even when a city has grown so that the improvement is costly, a fact worth remembering is that with the period of postponement, the costs steadily become greater.

Los Angeles has more trouble with the traffic problem than is to be observed in any other city. In large measure the reason is that streets were laid out to be narrow and crooked. This was done despite the circumstances that the available area embraced practically all out-doors. Now the task of undoing early mistakes has to be faced. While that city is adjusting its own troubles, smaller cities, yet cities likely to become great in extent and population, may profit by seeing the course to avoid.

PEACE IN THE RUHR

After a long period of passive resistance, Germany has ceased the struggle in the Ruhr. This gives the first inkling of a possible understanding with France, and a basis for peace. Whatever Germany may have thought would be the outcome of the plan to which it adhered with remarkable stubbornness, to the rest of the world the certainty of failure was apparent in advance. It could not be supposed that France, having deliberately entered the Ruhr could be persuaded to march out again without the gaining of a concession, or of a promise backed by adequate security. The restoration of the status quo was not desirable in the view of the French. That meant nothing to them but restoration of conditions that they had found intolerable. Evidence accumulates that, whatever may be the intent of Germany now, that up to the present it had not acted in good faith. Technically the victim of military defeat, it had more benefit from the war than had fallen to any of the victors. Judged by its own acts, it proposed to retain all of these advantages. Its industries, kept in full operation, tended to concentrate national wealth in the hands of a few, while keeping the government ostensibly helpless, handicapped by a debased and worthless currency. If Germany ever entertained the slightest notion of paying reparations, frankness compels the statement that there had been no sign of it heretofore. Cessation of resistance in the Ruhr may have a meaning. Such at least will be the hope of the world. It may be construed as the first Teutonic admission of defeat and indicate a degree of humility amenable to reason.

University of Southern California students will not be permitted to participate in inter-college matches. The faculty does not regard the cry "Kill him, kill him!" as promotive of higher education. At the same time the classmates may have their own boxing matches, the restriction being that student blood shall not be shed to cheer rival institutions.

Justice Follette of Los Angeles has resigned under fire, but intimates that after the smoke of battle has cleared away he will appear again as candidate for office. The role of target appears to have attractions.

A young woman arrested at one of the beach towns on a charge of murder, thereafter danced to a radio tune and caroled a blithesome song. Another, accused of being a multiple bigamist, wanted to know whose business it was how many husbands she had. Sometimes the insouciance of the younger generation seems a little startling.

Only a mother can distinguish between the mischievousness of her boy and the badness of the boy next door.

LIP READING

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Glancing over a morning paper I have just read the announcement that a class in lip reading has been established in the Grand avenue schools, Los Angeles.

The enrollment includes pupils from every part of the city and surrounding country. The class will be in charge of Miss Florence A. Messner, an expert teacher, who has been so successful in this line of work that many of her pupils are now filling positions in spite of their handicap of total deafness.

Since I have investigated the wonder of lip reading I find myself constantly marveling at the ignorance or apathy that induce deaf people to remain in the terrible isolation of their affliction when such a simple and effective avenue of escape is open to them.

One who has mastered lip reading can mingle with his fellows as freely, converse as easily and enjoy companionship as fully as any child of fortune who has unimpaired hearing.

The first time I visited a school of lip reading I conversed easily and with pleasure with the girl who opened the door. We discussed all kinds of topics and I never once suspected that she was deaf. Somebody told me after I left. Compare this girl's position in life with that of one who has to go about with an ear trumpet or one of these electrical affairs that are supplanting ear trumpets.

A lip reader can not only engage in a general conversation, but has, too, the extraordinary advantage of being able to will to know what anybody in his range of vision is saying. Were I running a detective bureau I'd engage off hand a corps of lip readers and send them into the haunts of criminals knowing that invaluable information would soon accrue from the experiment.

Few people are able to associate with the deaf without feelings of embarrassment and distress; but it takes a shrewd guesser to find out that a lip reader is unable to hear.

This is written purposely to rouse in people an interest in this valuable branch of study as well as to give hope to the deaf. Growups as well as children may enter lip reading classes and through their studies they may find it possible to re-enter active life with comfort, pleasure and profit.

Why is so little known of lip reading? Can't you help spread the glad tidings that will remove the handicap from the lives of the deaf?

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

The boys used to call his father "Old Tid." They refer to him as "Little Tiddleberry." Anyhow here's the story.

Little Tiddleberry is quite a rich man, even as rich men go in the United States. He inherited his money. Along with the money he inherited a huge steel trap which hangs in his front hall, brightly burnished. It is about the size of a bear trap, but it isn't. It is a trap for poachers. Its huge steel jaws could break the leg of a poacher if the illegitimate sportsman happened to be small. Old Tid's legs were thick and hairy. The trap did not break either of them, but it held him until his companions came to his rescue.

"Curse a country," said Old Tid, who was young Tid then. "A country in which traps can be set for men."

So he left the country first burying the steel trap. Years afterwards, when the poaching young Tid had become the well-to-do Mr. Tiddleberry of the U. S. A., he revisited the old home, dug up the trap, and carried it in triumph to the new.

"It's a proof of the chance America offers young men," he used to growl. "If I'd stayed at home the magistrates would have jailed me, sooner or later, for shooting a rabbit. Now I can buy up every magistrate in my old country."

An unbecoming boast, perhaps, but the truth. The second Old Tid was as proud of it as was his father. Once he wanted to have it guided, and was with difficulty restrained. Little Tiddleberry, the third of the line, is ashamed of it, in his heart. He says that one of these days he'll go to Europe to live.

"A gentleman," says Little Tiddleberry, "can be a gentleman over there. The common people know their place."

Praise the Lord and the American constitution, they don't know their place over here. Not in the sense that Little Tiddleberry means.

THE LISTENING POST

I saw the tiny shoot breaking through the earth. Green, quivering, to be trodden to death by my foot if I chose.

So tiny it almost escaped my observation.

Day by day I saw it. Until at the end of the season it was a rather vigorous shoot.

Perhaps as big as a small walking stick. To be broken off and cast away if I chose.

And so the year passed. And another.

I went forth upon an errand that took a long time.

And after ten years or fifteen or twenty I came back.

As I awakened in the morning a branch brushed my window. I looked out.

And there was a tree. With a trunk fully the girth of a man. And green limbs spreading here and there.

I could have rested myself among its branches.

And I might have bruised and beaten my fists against its sturdy trunk. Without even shaking it. It was my tiny shoot.

My vigorous twig as big as a stick. Grown into a tree.

And after a hundred years another man than I walked beneath its shade. That spread a hundred feet either side of the trunk.

Songs of the Poets

Song—By Christina Georgina Rossetti

When I am dead, my dearest,
Sing no sad songs for me;
Plant thou no roses at my head,
Nor shady cypress tree:
Be the green grass above me
With showers and dewdrops wet;
And if thou wilt, remember,
And if thou wilt, forget.

I shall not see the shadows,
I shall not feel the rain;
I shall not hear the nightingale
Sing on, as if in pain:
And dreaming through the twilight
That doth not rise nor set,
Haply I may remember
And haply may forget.

ADVICE TO CHINA

By DR. FRANK CRANE

AS EVERYBODY seems to be giving advice to China just at present, I see no reason why I should restrain the impulse to sit into the game. My advice has not been asked and it probably will not be heeded, but that does not interfere with the pleasure of giving it. Most of it also is second hand; still, I have never used it, and certainly nobody has ever followed it.

1. Now that China is rid of her monarchy, let her make a clean sweep and get rid of all the trappings and leavings of monarchy. Appoint a commission of business men to run the government. Elect no president. Hire a general manager. Clean up Peking and use it as a museum. It certainly is useless as a governmental tool. Send all the diplomats and ambassadors back home. Quit playing politics and go to work.

2. Adopt the principle of Single Tax. Of course the present land tax is nothing like single tax. Single tax is the only theory of taxation which is just and logical. Get rid of all tariffs and customs and "ilkins" and other forms of graft.

3. Get rid of the soldiers. At least put them all to work making roads and improving rivers and building railways instead of loafing around carrying guns and eating their heads off.

4. Establish a system of universal education. Instead of spending nine-tenths of the income on soldiers spend it on school teachers. Nothing but education will lift the population out of the mud, not only the actual mud of the streets and floors, but the spiritual mud of superstition and ignorance.

5. Simplify the language so that the child does not need to waste all his energy in learning letters. Distinguish between literacy and education. Teach the children the truths of science, the facts and laws of life. There is not much use having education unless it is a real equipment for life. China needs to quit studying puzzles and to begin studying science.

6. Realize the simplicity and practicality of Federalism. Let each province govern itself and mind its own business, and let the whole nation be managed by a commission which shall attend to all federal affairs.

7. Realize that the only way China may be redeemed is the only way any nation can be saved, from the bottom up, not from the top down.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

PLAIN TALK TO EUROPE

[Montreal Star]

Whatever may have actuated her financiers, the American nation did not go into the war for selfish reasons. The vast sums of money and even more valuable personal labor which the Americans have been expending in Europe for charitable purposes ever since the armistice have not been regarded as "investments" which will bear cash dividends. All these contributions to Europe's salvation have come from the very altruism at which Lord Birkenhead sneers; if the United States is to go in today, in anything like a systematic manner, the great mass of her people will agree to this action for philanthropic reasons. If philanthropy cannot work this miracle, certainly selfishness cannot.

There are several things that Europe has got to do to re-conquer the confidence of America. It must disband most of its armies. The Americans will neither send money to Europe nor let Europe keep the money it owes the United States, so long as they see it spent in the maintenance of swollen armaments—larger than existed before the war.

Again, it must stop starting a new "war scare" every fortnight. The American people will never go wholeheartedly into the work of straightening out the European tangle so long as every few weeks the risk that thereby they may be compelled to take on another war is brandished in their faces. Europe must decide that, for the present, nothing is or can be worth a war before it will get real American assistance.

Europe must take up its economic problems in the peace spirit and not in the war spirit. For instance, it must permit economic attraction and not racial hate to direct its use of transportation lines, as in the case of the old

It can doubtless do it again. But if that be its program, it should stop whining at the doors of the American republic for charity.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

The United States has refused to act with the League of Nations in relation to traffic in arms. It is not to be supposed from this that the government opposes restrictions touching this war-time commerce: It has been barred from participation. It could not become identified with the League of Nations now without stultifying itself still further.

If this country had entered into the compact, the plan having originated here, probably the league now would have been performing the work for which it had been designed. Not that the work is being wholly neglected, nor that the league peoples have failed in keeping back the impulse towards conflict.

But having proposed the League of Nations, this country, owing to the senate, repudiated its own project. This was the work of bitter partisanship. Men who had advocated the plan as ideal, scoffed at and rejected it, when it was presented by an administration to which they were hostile. From motives that did them no honor, they put the country in a false position, convicting it of bad faith.

That this was a blow to America's reputation, that it is an embarrassment, and must so remain, are both plainly to be seen.

Indictments have been brought against a number of persons suspected of having set some of the more destructive forest fires. Whether the acts are ascribed to malice or to carelessness has not yet transpired. The criminal who would deliberately destroy a forest, with all its actual and potential value, its sheltered animal life; do this knowing that homes and cities might be devoured by the flames, and human life snuffed out, is too dangerous a creature to be at large.

Of course the careless offender can't have much to say in his own behalf, and needs a lesson that will knock sense into him.

Manila politics take on a familiar aspect when leading politicians there are accused of grafting. The charges do not surprise. Some of those fellows had been making a noise like an individual with hand extended, palm upwards.

An interesting fact connected with the shooting of a robber recently, is that at the time of this check to his career, he was out on parole. Thus he heeded the precedent set by many more of his kind. His confession so far tells of six robberies in this period of being free on his honor.

As the parole system works in this state, it is but an idle formality for the court to pass sentence for any definite time. The sentence is edited and revised, invariably downwards, after the prisoner reaches the penitentiary.

The court knows what the offender deserves, and the prison authorities do not know; but they have the last say.

It appears from some of the Los Angeles papers that the visit of Senator Johnson was an event of vast importance. Other papers were only vaguely aware of the exalted presence, and managed to condense the record into such small space that many readers doubtless failed to see it.

Bulgarians are on the warpath. They prefer it to the paths of peace. Just why they are fighting does not particularly matter, for if not fighting for the present issue, they would have no difficulty in finding another incentive. It's anything for a row over there.

There is a rumor that a dictator may take the helm in Germany, but were he to do so, the chances are that he would let go in a hurry. So far as it is possible to judge the elements in Germany are not in a mood to be welded into immediate solidarity. There are limits to the influence even of a dictator.

The three counties of California having the greatest school enrollment are Los Angeles, Alameda and San Francisco, the figures being respectively 312,093, 84,107 and 76,244. These figures give at a glance some idea of the relative growth of the two sections. They do not mean that Alameda and San Francisco have not gained, but only that Los Angeles has gained much faster.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

HE ANSWERED BACK

"I won't have that boy in my class again."

"Why, what did the boy do?"

"He answered me back."

"He was disrespectful?"

"Disrespectful? That's not the word! He was impudent! He as good as told me that I don't know what I was talking about."

"What were you talking about? What did he say that was impudent?"

"We were having a lesson on the forests and I said something about the neglect of them and he got up and said it wasn't true in the state he came from."

"I told him kindly to remember that I was the teacher, and that I was supposed to know more than he did whereupon he said, 'Well, you don't! I've been there and you haven't!'"

"Imagine a boy talking to a teacher like that! I told him he was in my room to listen and learn of his betters and that as he couldn't seem to do it he'd better stay out. I won't have such impudence."

Now of course one of the first principles of human intercourse is the observance of courtesy in every relation. Once the polish is allowed to become scratched the raw human quality shows up and its crudeness is likely to give us a few twinges.

Children are crude. They have acquired very few principles of living, very elemental ones at that. The only way to teach them the finer, more subtle ones is by constantly practicing them in our dealings with the children.

Once the personal element enters into a discussion, all educational value vanishes and the situation becomes a crude wrangle, the child answers back. The parent and teacher has always to present a polished exterior, an impersonal attitude toward any question on which the child seems to differ from them.

A respectful, sincerely respectful, hearing and a courteous, sincerely courteous response will disarm the child's hostility. If we think a minute we will acknowledge that the instant some one makes a statement, or gives a direction that we do not approve, something bristling and rebellious rises within us and it takes all our training and experience to keep it under while we talk the matter over.

A child has not our training and experience. He is elemental in his emotional life and crude to rawness in his social relations. Nevertheless he will respond readily to the gentle word and the courteous suggestion just as he takes fire at the harsh word and the rude order.

LUCILE SPARKS IN GRAPHIC STORY OF
BERKELEY'S FIREHer Home Was Burned and Most of Her Belongings

The Glendale Press was fortunate in being able to give its readers a story of the Berkeley fire from the view point of a male student and fire fighter, Gerald Toll, who was not burned out and who gave devoted service to others less fortunate.

Today comes a long descriptive letter from Lucile Sparks, who taught for several years in the Broadway school and who is now completing a course at the State university. Her home was burned and she saved only such belongings as could be carried away as hand baggage. For the benefit of her many friends here she has sent to Mrs. E. D. Yard what she terms a "community letter," telling of her experience as a refugee. The letter follows:

Sept. 19, 1923,
2311 Bowditch,
Berkeley, Cal.
Dear Everybody: Since so many really unusual things have happened to me that I cannot write about them to all my family and friends, I am going to write a community letter which all are to read and consider their own personal letter. And as I always expect answers from my letters, I have, as you see, placed my address at the top of the first page so that each one may know where to write me and so that I may get what I desire daily, some mail.

"I have always imagined Berkeley as the place where only cool sea breezes blow. But last Sunday night a strong wind came to flap our curtains and howling around so that we could hardly sleep. In the morning it was still blowing a dry, hot wind from the northeast, as strong a wind as any Santa Ana I have ever experienced at home.

"When I went to a 2 o'clock class in the afternoon I smelled smoke. Before the hour was over there was so much smoke in the air that it was quite dark, and from time to time there was a glow to the light, that was quite disturbing. A little before 3 o'clock an army of firemen came to the door announcing that the class was to be dismissed and all the men were to go to the hills to fight the fire.

"I decided to go home for there the windows were closed and I knew it would be cooler. As I climbed the hill to the Braemar where we lived, other people were also hurrying in the same direction. The smoke was rolling down from the farther hills and I heard some one in passing say that the houses up there were burning. Even then I could see no flames and never once thought of danger. My only desire was to get out of the terrific wind and heat. When I entered the hall I breathed a sigh of relief for it was blessedly cool. I went to my room but before I closed the door I heard a man saying: "You girls better pack your things and be ready to get out. This house may not go. It all depends upon the wind, but you'd better be ready. He went from the fire department and went from house to house warning people. Even then I could not believe there was danger, so I walked to the end of the hall and looked out. Not much more than a block away a house was burning.

I didn't look long but went back to my room, got out my suit case, filled it with my best clothes, put what I could into my traveling bag. Esther had not come home, so I got her suit case and filled it with such of her things as I could find. I just opened drawers and grabbed, sometimes getting the old underwear and leaving the new. I knew now that I had to hurry. Moreover girls were hurrying out carrying coats and bags, the most scared looking people you could imagine and my door being open I could both see and hear them. Their fright didn't reassure me. Still Esther didn't come. Next I filled my brief case with all the books it would hold and began stuffing things into my laundry bag. I carried the bags, the laundry bag and our coats outside onto the lawn. By now the house just in back of ours was in flames, and the crackling was quite distinct, but Esther hadn't come and I didn't want to go without her, so I went back and filled a pillow case with whatever my hand happened to fall upon. I got Esther's best hat too, and piled our things on the grass beside me and I stamped it out. "Just then the wind seemed to change. Several of the girls who were also standing by their possessions exclaimed, "Oh, it won't come here now." But just then two men walked past, looked up at Braemar appraisingly and said: "This place ought to go. It's right in the path." Then the girls all either carried their things across the street to a vacant lot or scrambled into a machine, for they kept coming to carry the girls away. At this most exciting moment Esther came rushing in. I saw her go up the steps so dashed after her. When we got into our rooms she was so excited that when I said "Look quickly and see if there are any special treasures you want to take," she couldn't think of a thing, and goodness knows there was plenty to choose from. So we rushed out and carried our things across the street.

The wind changed again and we expected to see Braemar in flames any minute. We knew we couldn't carry away all we had with us, but a college fellow came in a Ford half filled with other unfortunate's belongings and offered to take our things. He told us to pile in too or we'd lose our things. We were taken to the north gate of the campus and dumped. I felt like a Belgian refugee or an immigrant at Ellis Island with my worldly goods beside me packed in a pillow case and a laundry bag, but there were plenty of others with no more aristocratic luggage. After a while a girl drove up in a machine and asked if she could take our things somewhere. We quickly piled them in and she said she would take them to the Whitecotton hotel. We started to walk across the campus for at the rate the fire was then coming we didn't know but what some of the university buildings would be burning soon. On the way we saw a woman sitting on her trunk holding a sofa pillow.

"Upon arriving at the Whitecotton we engaged a room and then went out to watch developments. All this had happened within about an hour. The next hour was a tense one. For a time it seemed the fire would sweep down to the business district. We thought perhaps we'd have to move farther, but the wind changed. It became a cool ocean breeze instead of the burning one from that awful furnace.

"You have probably read how the police and fire officials dynamited buildings to save others. The reports, together with the clanging of fire engines coming from all the surrounding towns, and the honk of automobiles made a distinct contrast to the quiet group of people gathered on the street, watching the smoke clouds and the flames visible over the tall buildings. We asked two girls we met, if they had saved anything, and they said, "Yes, our evening dresses." I suppose to them they seemed the most valuable. Another woman was coming down the street with a bird cage and her pet canary, which was all she had. Finally the girl brought our things to us and we took them to our room. It was on the fifth floor. We sat by our windows and watched the fire. Not until it had died down so that we could no longer see flames did we get ready for dinner.

"After dinner we followed the crowd in the direction of the fire. It was an awful sight, the hillsides lighted by burning heaps where once were houses. We escaped guards somehow and found ourselves opposite where the Braemar used to stand. There were the steps, the chimney and the bricks which formed the furnace room. A terrible feeling of homelessness came over me. I thought of the Japanese sufferers and heard many comments from passers-by, in respect to the San Francisco fire in 1906.

"We went back across the campus and the sights there were indescribable. Grand pianos, davenport, mahogany tables, oriental rugs, paintings, no end to the kind of house furnishings on the lawns, the lawn, everywhere. Some groups were being guarded. As we went on a machine drove past and a man in it called out: "All goods left at the base of the Campanile, will be guarded all night by the R. O. T. C."

We couldn't sleep. Every little while we would get up to look at that inferno of a hillside, still burning, the tall chimneys ghastly specters in the glow.

"The next morning after an early breakfast we started out to find a room. We finally got one a block from the campus, unattractive in furnishings and we have nothing to make it homey, all our lovely pillows gone up in smoke, and our couch covers no more. We hadn't even a needle and thread to mend the holes in our hosiery. But we are fortunate in having anything. The belongings of over so many of the students were picked up by machines and carried they know not where, and they have no idea what happened to them. Most of the things saved were taken to certain places and owners can recover by identifying them. Persons are going stoically from one place to another in search of treasures to remind them of their old home. The men students rushed into the houses in the path of the fire, got out what they could, took it to the campus, left it with no name to identify it, and went on to another house. I have often wondered what it would be like to be in a great fire or other terrible disaster. Now I know and I wish I could tell it pictorially for though awful it was exciting and interesting.

"So many students have suffered heavy losses that a pall seems to hang over the university.

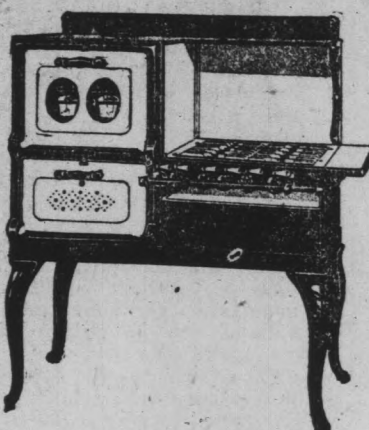

ONE-WAY FARE
FOR ROUND TRIP TO SAN FRANCISCO

Round-trip rates amounting to one-way fares between all points within the state of California have been authorized by the Railroad Commission for delegates to the annual convention of the 91st Division Association and the American Legion, and their families, on application of C. B. Sealey agent for the various rail lines throughout the state.

The conventions will be held in San Francisco, October 13 to 19, and the final return limit is fixed at November 15. The rates will not be open to the general public but will be available to delegates and dependant members of their families holding certificates issued by the organizations in question. It is expected that the low round-trip rate will be of great benefit to the membership of the two patriotic organizations and will greatly stimulate attendance at the conventions.

Some men would work if given a chance, but there are others who refuse to take chances.

WOMEN WEAK ON PSYCHOLOGY OF SELLING

Men Realize Competition and Fortify Themselves

We were talking about the psychology of salesmanship and whether it was a natural gift or could be transplanted into an arid soil. The other party to the dialogue was the head of a commercial college.

"Do you know," said he, "what a salesmanship, course usually stresses in the beginning?"

"I acknowledge my ignorance."

"Just personal cleanliness and neatness. It is fundamental, you know, but you wouldn't suppose it would be as necessary as it really is to begin so low down."

"But after that, what is the real key to successful salesmanship?" I queried. "Cleanliness is of course essential to success in any line of business unless you are a coal heaver, an engine driver, or a mule hobble."

"Essentially it is service that is in a measure unselfish and disinterested. Though it has its rewards there must be spontaneity in it. You have probably at some time gone into a store and approached an indifferent clerk asking for a certain article, only to be met by the reply: 'We have none of that in stock,' in a tone of such finality that you had not the courage to pursue the quest further at that counter and went to another store where the same lack might be found but where the clerk interested herself in your needs and persuaded you to accept a substitute. The more pains she took to please you, the more she impressed her personality upon you and the more you were likely to remember her when you wanted something else in her line."

"Do you think that men on the average are better sellers than women?" I asked.

"That is a hard question to answer," he replied, "because there are such brilliant exceptions to every rule. But it is true that many women have been inclined to look upon their tasks as simply a job to be held down with the least possible expenditure of effort and gray matter. They have never studied their work or tried to figure ways of improving it that would make them more capable and valuable to employers. Men realize the competition they have to meet and are eager to fortify themselves at every point."

"But, don't you think women are waking up," I insisted?

"Yes, they are beginning to develop professional pride and shrewdness. They are looking ahead more, and trying to perfect themselves. They need to. With the present methods of checking returns and efficiency and over-returns, employers are not going to carry dead wood long. The girl who just gets by is bound to lose out. Kindness commercialized, watered with brains, is certain to flower into good salesmanship, other things being equal."

"Of course that isn't all, by a long shot," he continued. "There is the clinching of decision with the wavering customer, there is the thorough knowledge of the stock handled and other factors that make the efficient salesman, but the best service is a basic element."

"You would make him first sell himself and then his goods," I said.

"Something like that," he admitted.

ASTRAKHAN LAMB FUR

While there are so many imitations of this fur that it is somewhat difficult for one not thoroughly versed in pelts to tell the real from the imitation, the genuine Astrakhan lamb comes principally from the province of Astrakhan in the south of Russia. The lamb is not more than six to twelve inches in length, and the usual color is brown, although white ones are found and some are quite black. The skins are usually dyed black, and the fur is very fine, soft and curly. Only the young lambs are particularly valuable for their skins, the larger lambs and half-grown animals being coarser and less silky and beautiful.

Crimmer is the pelt of the Crimean lamb which inhabits principally the Crimean Peninsula. Some black Crimmer skins are collected, but the majority are gray, and the grays vary greatly in shade and general tone. The curl also varies considerably.

WOMAN TREASURER IN CITY OF BERKELEY

For the first time in its history Berkeley has a woman city treasurer. Miss Pauline Young, young and possessed of more than usual good looks, has that position. She succeeds E. V. Grove, who held the position for 20 years. Grove was also tax collector, but that office is now held separately.

QUAINT JACKETS

Decidedly the newest and quaintest jacket are those made from the petticoats quilted by peasant women of Provence. The colors are charming and the patterns are delightfully neat and prim.

HUSBANDS ON EVERY BUSH IN JAVA

The South Sea Islands have been ridiculously overrated, according to a statement made here recently by Mrs. Whitney Sperry, San Francisco society woman and globe trotter, who has just returned from a 75,000 mile jaunt including a tour of the Orient, the South Seas and the antipodes.

In Java, Mrs. Sperry said, husbands may be picked from the trees, bushes and the road side. These are not human wrecks or doddering derelicts, but fine, handsome and charming men from Holland who go to Java to make their fortunes.

"The heat is so intense that most women refuse to live there," Mrs. Sperry went on to say, "so the only alternative these men have, if they wish to exchange single blessedness for harnessed cussedness, is to marry the native women. So you see what a golden opportunity there is for single white women."

FASHION'S FADS

Folding Umbrella for Travelling

A folding umbrella for travelling that fits into a leather case is both smart and practical. Another umbrella of brown silk has a most unusual handle of deep amber.

Separate Heels and Buckles

Something quite new for black satin pumps are heels and buckles of brilliantly brocaded material. These can be bought separately.

Taupe Fringe for Small Hat

A small close fitting hat covered entirely with fringe in two or three shades of taupe has a shaggy appearance that is quite chic.

Etched Crystal Ornaments for Neck

Exquisitely beautiful are the large crystal ornaments, oval in shape, that hang about the neck on slender black cords. These ornaments, etched with the most delicate figures, come from famous French jewelers. No two are alike.

Small Hat Brilliantly Embroidered

Slightly Chinese in inspiration are small hats of velvet brilliantly embroidered in colors and metal threads.

Two-Material Dresses Smart

Dresses made of two materials are very smart at present. An attractive model has a brown velvet skirt with a blouse of stamped velvet in brown and gold.

Beautiful Table Decorations

Candlesticks of etched glass with bases of silver and a large bowl for flowers make most beautiful table decorations.

Rainy Day Clothes for School Girl

Nothing has been forgotten for the school girl this fall. Even rainy day clothes are carefully thought out and attended to. A coat and cap of brilliant red rubberized silk is cheerful enough to offset clouds and weeping skies.

New Trimmings for Fall Frocks

The new trimmings are utterly delightful and suggest of themselves a dozen ways to make the new fall frock. From a well known French house come narrow bands with a double row of tufts closely resembling the old fashioned candle-wick work. Bright red tufts on a buff background, green on grey are two of the most attractive.

New Wool Material

Flamingo is the name of a new wool material for coats and suits that is particularly nice. The material is made or pressed in such a way that there are self-toned stripes, checks or plaids indented into the surface. The colors are wonderfully soft and becoming.

MODERN GIRL TREATED WITH INJUSTICE

Can Efficiently Resume Feminine Arts of Grandmother at Need

Writers hunting for opportunities to eulogize the first lady of the land, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, have acclaimed her skill as a knitter and indulged in a lot of congratulation of the fine example she is setting the wayward modern generation in thus maintaining the "solid accomplishments of home-making."

"The very example of a president's wife knitting in a nationwide competition, pitting her skill against that of her sisters in all walks of life and all sections of the United States," comments the Denver Rocky Mountain News, "is a fine thing for young people of today to view. The social graces are not to be frowned upon, but the solid accomplishments of home-making, which have added to the charm and sanctity of the American hearth, are of infinitely greater value in the long run. Americans are pleased to know there is a knitter in the White House. The plain and substantial virtues of an earlier standard, which are declared to be everywhere lacking today, are at least to be found in the president's home."

We are glad that Mrs. Coolidge, in addition to being a woman of rare social gifts also has feminine arts at her finger tips, but we protest that she could still be all woman and a good home maker without knowing how to cast off or purl.

Also, isn't it time the modern girl got some credit for her initiative and resourcefulness. When the war brought knitting to the front as an industry the girls of 1917 became as proficient as though they had commenced the art when beginning to list their alphabets at their mothers' knees. It showed that, when a need arises our women are equal to the demand.

One young woman with whom the writer is acquainted makes all her own sweaters. She acquired the art by reading directions in a magazine.

Our grandmothers were all right, God bless all of them that are living. But our girls of today are all right too, for the most part, and God bless them.

Mrs. Coolidge Inspects White House Grounds With Col. Sherrill to Suggest Improvements

The president's wife is taking an active interest in plans for improving the grounds about the executive mansion. She made a tour of inspection recently with Colonel Clarence O. Sherrill, officer in charge of public buildings and grounds. This photograph was made as they were returning to the north entrance of the White House.

SALLY, THE SENSITIVE GIRL

Sally's heart bruises very easily. She is a type. She is The Sensitive Girl.

Once upon a time there was a boy that Sally liked a great deal but he had a most exasperating way about him and frequently drove Sally into a frenzy of jealousy.

He would deliberately cultivate in her presence girls Sally didn't like and Sally would weep profusely in the secrecy of her room and blush and otherwise show her pain in public.

Her sensitiveness became common knowledge and sometimes the girls would play upon Sally's weakness.

Sally has grown up now but her imagination does not allow her to take anything for granted. She requires a special invitation when a visit to the movies is undertaken by general consent and understanding.

Almost every incident contains a hidden significance for Sally and she has a habit of brooding over these fancied meanings.

Sally certainly is sensitive.

She weeps easily. She sulks. She cannot be teased. Everybody likes her but there are times when her sensitiveness evokes the displeasure of her friends. It is this more than anything else that causes Sally to suffer. She begins to doubt everything and everybody and the result is that she hardly enjoys a party.

Often she is referred to sympathetically as "a poor girl," and Sally doesn't like it.

Her heart bruises so easily. She is a type. She is a very sensitive girl.

SEX EQUALITY PROMOTED BY ATHLETICS

Health and Good Looks, Business Asset to Women

Athletics is doing more to bring about the equality of the sexes than the women's party because it is a plane on which they can meet without jealousy and indulge honest admimations. It is responsible for the approach to uniformity in dress which man now accepts with approval.

Women have not been slow of recent years to follow the example of men and resort to athletics to maintain health and good looks. This is especially true of women who are earning their own living, for good health and good looks are business assets.

Women of the leisure class whose figures suffer from over-feeding have taken to it likewise and established expensive clubs for systematic exercises.

Only the stay-at-home mother who argues: "I'm married and settled for life and do not need to bother about my looks," is left out of the procession.

But with the kiddies coming up and criticizing mother's looks and with father getting out with the boys, she too may be drawn into it too.

At the Glendale High night school a large enrollment is reported for both men and women's gym classes with a prospect that teams will be organized for competitive basketball and other games.

HOME FOR WOMEN WORLD WAR VETERANS

The establishment of a home for disabled women veterans of the World war was announced in San Francisco by Mrs. Eugene K. Sturgis, of Oakland, chairman of the Women's Overseas Service league. The institution, she declared, is to be located at Danville, Ohio, using three buildings of the old soldiers' home there as a nucleus.

TREND OF FASHION

By HELEN MERRILL EMERY

The New Frocks Are of Alpaca

An extremely pretty model that is made of black mohair is shown in the sketch. It consists of a blouse and skirt. The blouse has pleats just at the sides. The blouse, plainly of Chinese origin, has bands of lacquer red taffeta and a monogram embroidered in red, blue and a touch of gold. The belt, with its cunning little pockets, one for a powder box and one for a handkerchief, is especially interesting.

One may also buy separate blouses of mohair in black, dark blue or brown. These have narrow scalloped collars of organdie or linen and are very appropriate to wear with a sport skirt of wool.

WOMEN GAINING IN BILLBOARD FIGHT

Advertising Should Not Be a Blot on Landscape

The billboard nuisance which the women's clubs have been fighting for years because of its disfiguring effect upon the landscape, is still unvanquished and likely to invite their attacks for years to come. But the field is gradually narrowing and the time may come when the courts will sustain ordinances regulating the sort of structures that private owners can put upon their lots or allow to be placed there. Advertising has its legitimate place where it should be found, but it should not be permitted to offend the eye and be a blot upon God's country. The fight should be kept up.

DEATH TO THE UNLUCKY IN AFRICA

Children born with some abnormality, or considered by the diviners to be unlucky for a great diversity of reasons, are doomed to death," according to a passage from the British governor's report on Tanganyika (formerly German East Africa) recently issued.

Among those considered "unlucky" are those whose lower teeth are cut before the upper and those whose parents have failed to undergo initiation into certain tribal ceremonies. These children are killed by deliberate starvation and neglect, suffocation, poisoning, or injury at birth. Or, if a less obvious method is required, they are exposed to the unhealthy climate of the low country.

GLENDALE HIGH MEETS FILLMORE ELEVEN TODAY

Dynamiters to Tackle Northerners on Local Field

Coch Hayhurst's Glendale High school footballers will take on the Fillmore High aggregation this afternoon in the second practice game on the local schedule. The game will be played on the High school field, and will be called at 3:00.

On the eve of the game Hayhurst is inclined to be pessimistic about his team. After two weeks of solid smiles, the Glendale mentor has begun the Gloomy Gus stuff. He says that his men are not showing their stuff the way they should, and that some decided improvement will have to take place before they can hope to win the Central league flag.

The Glendale lineup has not yet been announced. It is probable that a different team than the one that started against Van Nuys, will open the Fillmore game. As in the first practice encounter, numerous changes will be made during the game, in order that as many players as possible will have a chance to show their stuff.

Tomorrow Glendale will journey up to Oxnard, where the local team will take on the high school of that city. Not much is known of either of the northern teams, but it is certain that Glendale will give them a run for their money. The Central league season will open on October 19, when Glendale meets South Pasadena.

DUCK SEASON AT LAKE ELSINORE TO OPEN OCT. 13

Doves and Quail Will Also Be in Abundance at Southern Lake

Hunting Superintendent "Billy" Frank of the Southern California Athletic and Country Club's properties at Lake Elsinore advises there is great abundance of doves and quail on the great preserve, but that large flights of ducks to the lake at the beginning of the season which opens October 1, is doubtful, because the feeding grounds have just been renewed this season, and the ducks are most likely to stop at old-established feeding grounds first. However, after the first few days of shooting elsewhere the ducks will seek shelter and feed at Lake Elsinore.

For this reason, duck shooting on the club's properties will begin Saturday the 13th, and shooting be permitted every Saturday thereafter, during the season. By the time the large ducks fly south, duck shooting at the lake should be first-class. New, modern floating blinds have been provided, also shooting spaces for 50 guns. Frank will also supply 200 live decoys. The lake is to be patrolled to prevent poaching. Members must make reservations with Mr. Frank for places in blinds and shooting spaces. Members desiring to take advantage of accommodations at Lake Shore lodge, which is the property of the club and on the site of the big clubhouse to be erected, should make phone or mail reservations with Frank, as the building is in his charge after October 1. Row boats are available for hunting purposes, also saddle horses for quail and dove hunting, who would go far into the hills, on 10,000 acres of which the club has the hunting privileges under long lease.

FANS DISPLAY KEEN INTEREST IN BIG SERIES

[By Associated Press]
NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Interest in the coming world's series has not slackened because of the prospect that the same teams, the New York Yankees and Giants, will battle for baseball supremacy for the third successive year, if advance ticket applications pouring into the offices of both clubs can be taken as proof. Executives of both organizations said today they were being flooded by requests for seats from all parts of the country.

The Yankee Stadium has a seating capacity of slightly more than 50,000, with sufficient standing room to accommodate from 5000 to 10,000 more. The scale of prices that will prevail at both the Polo Grounds and Yankee Stadium follows: Box seats, $6.00; reserved seats, $5.50; general admission, unreserved, $3.30; bleachers, $1.10.

NAVY WILL PLAY AT PASADENA ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Annapolis Eleven to Meet Winner of Pacific Coast Conference

[By Associated Press]
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 28.—The navy football team will be permitted to make a trip to California to meet the intercollegiate champions of the Pacific coast on New Year's day, it was officially announced yesterday by Rear Admiral Henry B. Wilson, superintendent of the naval academy.

The announcement is by way of an invitation from the Pasadena Tournament of Roses association, extended a couple of weeks ago. Official announcement yesterday that the football eleven of the United States Naval academy at Annapolis would represent the East in the annual Tournament of Roses New Year's day football game at Rose bowl, Pasadena, on January 1, 1924, was made by Admiral Wilson of the Naval academy and Chairman Les Henry of the Tournament football committee.

The opponent of the Navy will be the team which wins the football championship of the Pacific coast, in all probability U. S. C., California or Stanford. It is understood that all members of the Pacific coast conference have tentatively agreed to represent the West should they be victorious during the season.

Admiral Eberle expressed a desire last year to have the Navy come West so that "his boys" could see the sailors in action. Evidently the wish became more than a vague notion once the momentum was put behind the campaign. Navy is coached by Bob Fowlwell, former Pennsylvania coach and a very capable football mentor. This year's regular schedule includes many tough contests. Here's Navy's schedule for the season:

September 29—William and Mary College at Annapolis.
October 6—Dickinson at Annapolis.
October 20—Penn State.
October 27—Princeton.
November 3—Colgate at Annapolis.
November 10—St. Xavier at Annapolis.
November 17—Army at New York.
January 1—Navy vs. ? at Pasadena.

The schedule is of sufficient heft to insure a strong Eastern entry in the gridiron classic. Five of their season's games are rated particularly tough. Colgate, Penn State, Army, Princeton and whatever team they meet here are insurance against set-ups.

CUB VARSITY TO TACKLE FROSH TOMORROW

Southern Branch Footballers to Have First Taste of Battle

When the University of California Southern Branch footballers take on the Frosh of the same institution on Moore field tomorrow, the public will know a great deal more about the Cub varsity than it does now. This will be the first public showing of the Bruins since Coach Jimmy Cline commenced his system of secret practices last week.

This first encounter will give the dopesters a chance to see whether the Cub footballers have anything in the way of competition to offer the other conference teams. It has been whispered around that the Bruins have a first class team, and that with the aid of the Andy Smith methods they should show some real stuff. However, Cline makes no such claims for his charges. He says that they will pass, but are not the brilliant bunch that some would have us believe.

About 40 men, some of them veterans, but most of them inexperienced, constitute the Cub varsity. They have shown that they have several million dollars worth of fight, and all the spirit necessary for a championship team. Cline, Berkey and Toney, the Cub mentors, will produce a team that will give the other conference squads a real scrap when they tackle the Bruins.

The frosh are about 45 in number. They are a real husky looking gang of footballers, lacking only experience to make them a real formidable team. Among them there are several promising youngsters.

DUCK SEASON TO OPEN MONDAY MORNING

Good Duck Hunting Is Indicated from Advance Reports

The duck season for 1923 will open next Monday morning at a half hour before sunrise. With the other hunting season that opened earlier this month waning, the open season on ducks, also geese, jacksnipe and mud hens will no doubt be welcomed with many rounds of number 6 shot.

Reports that have reached Peterson, hunting authority at the B. H. Dyas company, indicate that plenty of ducks, especially sprigs, will be on hand at the lakes and other places where ducks hold out on the opening and for some time after. The limit on ducks is 25 birds a day or fifty a week.

Public shooting is allowed on parts of the sloughs and mud flats of Del Rey, also at Sunset Beach and in the upper back country of Balboa Bay.

Other ideal locations for duck hunting will be at Big Bear Lake, Baldwin Lake, Arrowhead Lake, a part of Buena Vista Lake, Cuyamaca Lake and Moreno and Sweetwater Dams, near San Diego.

Good duck hunting will be had at locations in Imperial Valley, judging from reports received by the Dyas company expert from Fred Raymer's public duck club, Ed Finney's club and Captain Davis' Mullet Island Club, all in the Imperial Valley district.

THE NAVY TO PLAY AT PASADENA

Now comes the word that Annapolis, the United States Naval Academy, will play the winner of the Pacific Coast conference at Pasadena, New Year's Day. Such an announcement receives most hearty applause from the entire west, and southern California, especially. The West has gained an honor not lightly bestowed. For the entire academy will in all probability come West to cheer for their team. The battle fleet will be concentrated at Los Angeles harbor, and as many men as possible will be given shore leave in order that they may see the game. Only enough bluejackets will be left to man the ships. It will be a great event.

The colleges in the conference have all been invited, in the event that they carry off the honors, to send their team to meet the Cadets. That the winner will accept is undoubted. California, U. S. C., Stanford, which ever wins the conference, or Oregon, O. A. C., Washington state university of Washington or Idaho, they all have a chance, and each would welcome the chance to meet the Navy team. No matter who wins. And it will be a great game. The Navy has a remarkable football history. The bluejackets will prove a great drawing card. Now for the battle to see who will tackle the Navy, on New Year's Day.

THOSE GOLDEN BEARS
We have commented at length in the past few days upon the condition of the University of California football team, and the chances of the Golden Bears to produce another Wonder Team. It may seem that we have given considerable space to the Blue and Gold eleven, but so important have the Californians become in western football that their importance cannot be overestimated.

Since the Alumni game last Saturday, there has been quite a difference of opinion in regard to the showing of the Golden Bears in that contest. Many have said that it was the worst game ever played by a California team coached by Andy Smith. Others told us that the Bears will have their greatest season this year, that they are in the best form ever.

The animal fell and Brown walked over to it and found two dead deer instead of one. He says the second deer was standing right behind the first and his one bullet killed both animals. Anyway he brought home two deer.

LUIS FIRPO WAS REALLY FLOORED IN FIRST ROUND

Argentine Received But Rose Before He Was Called "Out"

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (United Press).—No loser ever won more prestige or earned more glory in defeat than Luis Angel Firpo did when he was knocked out by Jack Dempsey in a fight that for thrills, action and savage fighting surpassed any drama ever enacted in a ring or on the stage.

Rather unfortunately for him, Firpo was not restrained by his advisors from making some alibis about the referee that, even if they were true, retracted somewhat from the sportsmanship that the Argentine was thought to have possessed.

Firpo did not need an alibi for the showing he made in the ring against the champion. He was not expected to make any excuses for a showing that was the bravest and most gallant that a fighter has ever shown in such an important contest.

When Firpo said that he was fouled twice by Dempsey he was partially right. Dempsey did hit him once on the breakaway; Dempsey did hit him on one occasion when the round had ended, and the champion may have punched him once before he was back in a fighting position after a knockdown.

Firpo should have known, however, that the infraction of the rules were such a trifle of excitement, and when they were both punched so dizzy that they had no idea that rules ever existed and when they were influenced only by the savage dictates of self preservation.

Perhaps Firpo does not know it, because he admitted after the fight that he did not hear the timekeeper counting at any time during the bout, but Firpo should take the word of unprejudiced writers in the press box who KNOW that he was knocked out in the first round before Dempsey had done anything about which he complained.

Early in the first round, Firpo was on the floor for the count of ten. He was not declared out because the new system of counting, established in New York, failed to work perfectly under the stress and intense excitement of the moment.

this particular time, the timekeeper reached ten, beyond all question of doubt. He hesitated then, apparently expecting the referee to declare "Out." The referee looked at the timekeeper and just as apparently thought that it was his duty to declare the fight ended.

In that second or two of hesitation, Firpo arose to his feet and the fight went on, although he had been really knocked out. Dempsey's offense in hitting Firpo on the breakaway did not make him liable for disqualification. Both fighters were told, even though they were to defend themselves at all times, and when Firpo failed to do so, it was his own fault.

The champion could have been disqualified for not going to a neutral corner after each down and for striking Firpo after the gong had ended the first round. However, the referee did not discriminate against Firpo in failing to declare Dempsey the loser on a foul.

It was just as apparent to the ring-side as it was known by the referee that Dempsey was not in full possession of his faculties. It was realized that he hadn't heard the bell in the first round and that his head was so clouded that he couldn't find his corner until one of his seconds came out after him.

ANGELS DEFEAT SACRAMENTO SOLONS

Bees Sting Seals, Oaks Shut Out Beavers, Suds Beat Tigers

Los Angeles took a ballgame from Sacramento yesterday. Quite an unusual happening this is, for it is the first game the Angels have won since Napoleon beat the Mexicans at Valley Forge. George Lyons chucked for the Seraphs, and his game was almost faultless. He allowed the Sacs but five hits and one run.

The Angels piled up just four more runs than did Sacramento, making their victory a 5 to 1 win. Until the fourth inning the game was a scoreless tie. In that frame Los Angeles started the affair off in fine shape, scoring three runs off as many hits. The Solons made their one and only tally in an effort to retaliate in the next inning. Not until the eighth was there any more scoring. In that inning the Angels got two runs off two hits; and thus tied away the pastime.

Candlish was on the mound for Sacramento, but was yanked after the first hit, best of the Angels. He was replaced by Chief Yellowhorse, who was not more than a shade better. The Seraphs collected a total of ten hits off the two Sac heavies.

The score:

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—Salt Lake mauled Gary in the second and sixth innings and made it two in a row from the league leaders yesterday, 10 to 4. After San Francisco had gained a two-run advantage in the opening round, Bee batsmen attacked Gary viciously and with two down, pounded a homer, three doubles and two singles for five tallies. Gary remained but was routed four innings later by another avalanche of swats which Mitchell, his successor, was unable to check. This netted four more runs.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 28.—Walter Mills, pitching for Oakland, shut out the Portland Beavers here yesterday in a snappy game, 3 to 0. The Oaks scored their three runs all in the first inning on three hits and a Beaver error. Thereafter Eckert performed on the mound as well as did his opponent.

SEATTLE, Sept. 28.—Elmer Jacobs, leading twirler of the Coast League, pitched masterful ball yesterday, beating Vernon 7 to 2. Jacobs struck out ten men and allowed but one earned run. He fanned Chadbourne and High in the ninth inning with the bases full.

BAPTISTS ARE TO OBSERVE RALLY WEEK

Have Set September 30 to October 7 as the Time

Rally week will be observed by the members and friends of the First Baptist church of Glendale, corner Louise and Wilson, on September 30 to October 7, according to an announcement sent out Thursday by Rev. Ernest E. Ford, pastor of that church.

The rallying of the membership and forces of the church and Sunday school will start at 9:30 o'clock next Sunday morning, at which time the annual rally event of the Sunday school will be held.

An effort is being made by the leaders of this school to make the attendance next Sunday the record of the year. A special program is being planned for this service and to this everyone in Glendale is invited. The graduation of members of the different departments will take place at that time.

On Wednesday evening of next week the annual meeting of the church will be held. Yearly reports will be given and the election of officers for the coming year will take place.

The annual banquet of the Tri Mu class will be held in the social basement of the church on Thursday evening. At this event it is expected a hundred or more members of this organization will be present. Reports of committees will be heard and officers for the ensuing year will be elected. The latter part of the evening will be given over to an especially prepared program.

On Sunday morning, October 7, the rally of the church membership will take place. There have been a large number of new members added to the church during the past year and these, along with the older members, are expected to be present on this rally morning. On the afternoon of Sunday, October 7, the finance committee of the church will make an every-member canvass, the motto of the drive being: "Something from every member."

At the evening service, October 7, the men of the Tri Mu class will have complete charge. It is understood that a program of unusually interesting numbers is being prepared for this occasion, these to consist of men's chorus, male quartet, solos, instrumental numbers and other features. Everyone in Glendale and especially the men of the city are invited to attend this service. It is understood that the Rotary club of Glendale will attend this service in a body.

DR. ELWOOD LYON SPEAKS TONIGHT, PRE-COMMUNION

Dr. Elwood P. Lyon of Pasadena, will speak at the service at the Glendale Presbyterian church this evening. His subject will be "Why the Church?" He is a well-known evangelist and has conducted evangelistic services all over the United States. This will be the concluding service of pre-communion week and is popularly known among the local Presbyterians as "Family night." The session will meet at the close of this service to receive new members into the church and at the same time on confession of faith. It is expected that a large audience will gather to hear the message of Dr. Lyon.

The services of this week and the coming Sunday are of special interest because of the fact that next Sunday is the last day that the Presbyterians will worship in the church building at East Broadway and Cedar streets. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the Sunday morning service and at the same time a large number of new members will be publicly welcomed. The closing service on Sunday evening will be an evangelistic service and the sermon will be preached by the pastor, Rev. W. E. Edmunds. It is expected that there will be a large number of decisions at this service. At the conclusion of the service the keys of the church will be formally turned over to the officials of the Broadway Methodist church, who have purchased the building and will continue to use it for public worship.

ALLENRUH has been tried and tested for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and pitiable and where the patient was hopeless.

Mr. James H. CYNOPSIS

One of the most popular studies in the quartier Latin was that of the three young English artists, Taffy, the Laird and Little Billee. Svengali, the musician, a long-haired, shabby-looking man, was there one afternoon playing for them when the door opened and a strange figure appeared, a girl clad in a soldier's overcoat, short petticoat and huge slippers, her ankles showing above them.

She was Trilby O'Ferrall, a model, she said—had come in to listen to the music. She was posing for Durien, the sculptor, down stairs—posing for everything, especially the feet. And kicking off her big slippers she displayed "the handsomest foot in all Paris."

Indeed her feet were so beautiful that Little Billee was thrown into silent raptures. Svengali flashed his black eyes at her languishingly as he played.

The talk veered to music, of which Trilby confessed she was very fond. Her favorite song, she said, was "Ben Bolt," which, politely encouraged by Little Billee, she proceeded to sing.

From her throat issued a volume of sound of fine quality; but never once did she hit upon a true note. Trilby was tone-deaf. She finished her song amid an embarrassing silence, which was finally broken by Little Billee's words of polite thanks.

Soon she left them, and five minutes later Little Billee had scratched on the wall an outline of Trilby's foot.

Trilby's father had been a gentleman, but a drunkard; and his mother a barmaid. Upon their death the girl had been left with the care of a small brother, whom she supported by becoming first a laundress and later a model.

(Part I—Continued)

At the time this story begins, this small waif and stray was "en pension" with le pere Martin, the rag-picker, and his wife, the dealer in bric-a-brac and inexpensive old masters. They were very good people, and had grown fond of the child, who was beautiful to look at, and full of pretty tricks and pluck and cleverness—a popular favorite in the Rue du Puits d'Amour and its humble neighborhood.

PART SECOND

Nobody knew exactly how Svengali lived, and very few knew where (or why). He occupied a roomy dilapidated garret, on sixième, in the Rue Tite-Liard; with a truckle-bed and a pianoforte for furniture, and very little else.

He was poor; for in spite of his talent, he had not yet made his mark in Paris. His manners may have been accountable for this. He would either fawn or bully, and he could be grossly impertinent. He had a kind of cynical humor, which was more offensive than amusing, and always laughed at the wrong thing, at the wrong time, in the wrong place. And his laughter was always derisive and full of malice. And his egotism and conceit were not to be borne; and then he was poor and tawdry and dirty in his person; more greasily, mattedly unkempt than even a really successful pianist has any right to be, even in the best society.

He was not a nice man, and there was no pathos in his poverty—a poverty that was not honorable, and need not have existed at all; for he was constantly receiving supplies from his own people in Austria—his old father and mother, his sisters, his cousins, and his aunts, hard-working, frugal folk of whom he was the pride and the darling.

He had but one virtue—his love of his art; or, rather, his love of himself as a master of his art—the master; for he despised, or affected to despise, all other musicians, living or dead—even those whose work he interpreted so divinely, and pitied them for not hearing Svengali give utterance to their music, which of course they could not utter themselves.

He had ardently wished to sing, and had studied hard to that end in Germany, in Italy, in France, with the forlorn hope of evolving from some inner recess a voice to sing with. But nature had been singularly harsh to him in this one respect—unfavorable. He was absolutely without voice, beyond the harsh, hoarse, weak raven's croak he used to speak with, and no method availed to make one for him. But he grew to understand the human voice as perhaps no one has understood it—before or since.

So in his head he went forever singing, singing, singing, as probably no human being has ever yet been able to sing out loud for the glory and delight of his fellow-mortals; making unheard heavenly melodies of the cheapest, triviallest tunes—tunes of the café concert, tunes of the nursery, the shop-parlor, the guard-room, the school-room, the pothouse, the slum. There was nothing so humble, so base even, but that his magic could transform it into the rarest beauty without altering a note. This seems impossible, I know. But if it didn't where would the magic come in?

He played accompaniments at café concerts, and even then he gave offense; for in his contempt for the singer he would play too loud, and embroil his accompaniments with brilliant improvisations of his own, and lift his hands on high and bring them down with a bang in the sentimental parts, and shake his dirty mane and shrug his shoulders, and smile and leer at the audience, and do all he could to attract their attention to himself. He also gave a few music lessons (not at ladies' schools, let us hope), for which he was not well paid, presumably, since he was always with-out the sou, always borrowing money, that he never paid back, and exhausting the pockets and the patience of one acquaintance after another.

He had but two friends. There was Gecko, who lived in a little garret close by in the Impasse des Ramoneurs, and who was second violin in the orchestra of the Gymnase, and shared his humble earnings with his master, to whom, indeed, he owed his great talent, not yet revealed to the world.

Svengali's other friend and pupil was (or rather had been) the mysterious Honorine, of whose conquest he was much given to boast, hinting that she was "une jeune femme du monde." This was not the case. Mademoiselle Honorine Cahen (better known in the quartier latin as Mimi la Salope) was a dirty, drabby little dolly-mop of a Jewess, a model for the figure—a very humble person indeed, socially.

She was, however, of a very lively disposition, and had a charming voice, and a natural gift of singing so sweetly that you forgot her accent, which was that of the "toute qu'il y a de plus canaille."

She used to sit at Carrel's, and during the pose she would sing. When Little Billee first heard her he was so fascinated that "it made him sick to think she sat for the figure"—an effect, by the way, that was always produced upon him by all specially attractive figure models of the gentler sex, for he had a reverence for woman. And before everything else, he had for the singing woman an absolute worship. He was especially thrall to the contralto—the deep low voice that breaks and changes in the middle and soars all at once into a magnified angelic voice. It pierced through his ears to his heart, and stirred his very vitals.

He had once heard Madame Alboni, and it had been an epoch in his life; he would have been an easy prey to the strains! Even beauty paled before the lovely female voice singing in the middle of the note—the nightingale killed the bird of paradise.

I need hardly say that poor Mimi la Salope had not the voice of Madame Alboni, nor the art; but it was a beautiful voice of its little kind, always in the very middle of the note, and her artless art had its quick seduction.

She sang little songs of Beranger—"Grand'mère, parlez-vous de lui!" or "Ten souvenirs-tu disais un capitaine—" or "Enfant, c'est moi qui suis Lisette!" and such like pretty things, that almost brought the tears to Little Billee's easily moistened eyes.

But soon she would sing little songs that were not by Beranger—little songs with slang words Little Billee hadn't French enough to understand; but from the kind of laughter with which the points were received by the "rapins" in Carrel's studio he guessed these little songs were vile, though the touching little voice was as that of the seraphim still; and he knew the pang of disenchantment and vicarious shame.

Svengali had heard her sing at the Brasserie des Porcherons in the Rue du Crapaud-volant, and had volunteered to teach her; and she went to see him in his garret, and he played to her, and leered and ogled, and flashed his bold, black, beady Jew's eyes into hers, and she straightaway mentally prostrated herself in reverence and adoration before this dazzling specimen of her race.

So that her sordid, mercenary little gutter-dragged soul was filled with the sight and the sound of him, as of a lordly, godlike, shawm-playing, cymbal-banging hero and prophet of the Lord God of Israel—David and Saul in one!

And then he set himself to teach her—kindly and patiently at first, calling her sweet little pet names—his "Rose of Sharon," his "Pearl of Babylon," his "casselle-eyed little Jerusalem skylark"—promised her that she should be the queen of the nightingales.

But before he could teach her anything he had to unteach her all she knew; her breathing, the production of her voice, its emission—everything was wrong. She worked indefatigably to please him, and soon succeeded in forgetting all the pretty little sympathetic tricks of voice and phrasing Mother Nature had taught her.

But, though she had an exquisite ear, she had no real musical intelligence—no intelligence of any kind except about sou's and centimes; she was as stupid as a little downy owl, and her voice was just a light native warble, a throatless pipe, all in the head and nose and throat (a voice he didn't understand, for once), a thing of mere youth and health and bloom and high spirits—like her beauty, such as it was—beaute du diable, beaute damnee.

She did her very best and practiced all she could in this new way, and sang—herself hoarse; she scarcely ate or slept for practicing. He grew harsh and impatient and coldly severe, and of course she loved him all the more; and the more she loved him the more nervous she got and the worse she sang. Her voice cracked; her ear became demoralized; her attempts to vocalize grew almost as comical as Trilby's. So that he lost his temper completely, and called her terrible names, and pinched and punched her with his big bony hands till she wept words with Niobe, and borrowed money of her—five franc pieces, even francs and demifrancs—which he never paid her back; and browbeat and bullied and bally-ragged her till she went quite mad for love of him, and would have jumped out of his sixth floor window to give him a moment's pleasure!

He did not ask her to do this—it never occurred to him, and would have given him no pleasure to speak of. But one fine Sabbath morning (a Saturday, of course) he took her by the shoulders and choked her, neck and crop, out of his garret, with the threat that if she ever dared to show her face there again he would denounce her to the police—an awful threat to the likes of poor Mimi la Salope!

"For where did all those five-franc pieces come from—hein?" with which she had tried to pay for all the singing lessons that had been thrown away upon her? Not from merely sitting to painters—help!"

Thus the little gazelle-eyed Jerusalem skylark went back to her native streets again—a mere mudlark of the Paris slums—her wings clipped, her spirit quenched and broken, and with no more singing left in her than a common or garden sparrow—not so much!

And so, no more of "la belle Honorine!"

The morning after this adventure Svengali woke up in his garret with a tremendous longing to spend a happy day; for it was a Sunday, and a very fine one.

He made a long arm and reached his waistcoat and trousers off the floor, and emptied the contents of their pockets on to his tattered blanket; no silver, no gold, only a few sous and two-sou pieces, just enough to pay for a meager premier déjeuner!

He had cleared out Gecko the day before, and spent the proceeds (ten francs, at least) in one night's riotous living—pleasures in which Gecko had had no share; and he could think of no one to borrow money from but Little Billee, Taffy, and the Laird, whom he had neglected and left untapped for days.

So he slipped into his clothes, and looked at himself in what remained of a little sick mirror, and found that his forehead left little to be desired, but that his eyes and temples were decidedly grimy.

Wherefore, he poured a little water out of a little jug into a little basin, and, twisting the corner of his pocket-handkerchief round his dirty forehead, he delicately dipped it, and removed the offending stains. His fingers, he thought, would do very well for another day or two as they were; he ran them through his matted black mane, pushed it behind his ears, and gave it the twist he liked (and that was so much disliked by his English friends). Then he put on his beret and his velvet cloak, and went forth into the sunny streets, with a sense of the fragrance and freedom and pleasantness of Sunday morning in Paris in the month of May.

He found Little Billee sitting in a zinc hip-bath, busy with soap and sponge; and was so tickled and interested by the sight that he quite forgot for the moment what he had come for.

"Hiemmel! Why the devil are you doing that?" he asked, in his German-Hebrew-French.

"Doing what?" asked Little Billee, in his French of Stratford-atte-Bowe.

"Sitting in water and playing with a cake of soap and a sponge!"

"Why, to try and get myself clean, I suppose!"

"Ach! And how the devil did you get yourself dirty, then?"

To this Little Billee found no immediate answer, and went on with his ablation after the hissing, splashing, energetic fashion of Englishmen; and Svengali laughed loud and long at the spectacle of a little Englishman trying to get himself clean—"tachtat de se nettoyer!"

AT THE THEATRES

"BRIGHT SHAWL"

Attraction Once Again, Gateway

Jetta Goudal, famous French actress, brings a new type of vamp to the American screen in "The Bright Shawl," the first National picture starring Richard Barthelmess.

Mme. Goudal, making her cinema debut in this production, which will be shown at the Gateway theater again today, plays the role of La Pilar, a sweetheart spy of Spain, who sets out to trap the young American who supports the cause of the Cuban patriots trying to overthrow the yoke of Spain.

Smooth, beguiling, treacherous, with the sly treachery of the conscienceless Eurasian, La Pilar lures with a smile and strikes to the heart with a knife.

Thus does she put out of the way the unsuspecting young Andres Escobar, and then sends the Spanish pack of army wolves after Escobar's friend, the American, whose courage, however, saves not only his own life but also his love.

HOOT GIBSON IS "OUT OF LUCK" AT THE GLENDALE

Thrills mingle with laughs, dangerous "stunts" with spectacular naval maneuvers and comical mishaps, in a diverting blend in "Out of Luck," new Universal attraction featuring Hoot Gibson, to be shown at the Glendale theater.

The versatile Hoot plays the part of a cowboy who joins up with Uncle Sam's gobs, and his troubles, adventures, and the romance that underlies them, make an engrossing story. Hoot, as a sailor mingles thrills and fun. His "death-defying" walk on a boat-boom, his side-splitting and unsuccessful attempts to sleep in a ship's hammock, his seasickness and struggles with the naval rules and regulations will recall chuckles long after the picture has gone. It is the old Hoot Gibson with many new tricks, and said to be the best role he has ever had.

The full Pacific fleet in maneuvers, form the background for the sea scenes, taken on the U. S. S. California flagship, during a cruise. Practice with the big guns, work on the battleship's bridge, and other features lend thrills. There are some speedy fist fights and a thrilling rescue as well as various other diversions.

"TRILBY" OPENS
AT THE T. D. & L.
THEATER TODAY

Creighton Hale, already one of the most popular juveniles of the screen, is said to add materially to his laurels in his interpretation of the role of "Little Billee," the sensitive, aristocratic British art student and lover of Trilby, in Richard Walton's "Trilby," a first National attraction, now playing at the T. D. & L. theater.

Producer Tully and Director James Young warmly congratulated themselves upon their selection of Hale for this important role.

JAMES W. FOLEY

THE BATTLE OF THE LAWN

Here lies the drum that bravely beat
And the fife that sounded shrill
To the tramp and tramp of marching feet
But the warring notes are still.
Here lies the flag all gory red
That was borne up the hillside steep.
Ere the ranks were torn and the soldiers dead—
Say, where do the soldiers sleep?

I found them there when the day was done,
The flag and the drum and the fife,
The battle was lost and the battle won
For such is the way of life.
I lifted them one by one and sighed,
With the shadows falling deep,
On the field where the soldiers bled and died—
Say, where do the soldiers sleep.

The drum I put where the dish-pan stood,
And Oh, but the pan was bent,
And beaten so where the knobby wood
Potato-masher went.
As it beat the horrid war's alarms,
And the flag with its flaunt and flirt
That led these gallant men-at-arms
Was my gay-hued outing shirt.

And the fife was a favorite cherry stem
That once in my pipe was fast,
But what was a favorite pipe to them
As the soldiers breathed their last?
It's cracked and split where they tramped about,
'Twould make the angels weep.
Say, find me a switch that is good and stout,
And—where do the soldiers sleep?
